

Delivering Health Services in Fragile States

Health and Fragile States Dossier

With some of the worst health indicators and the least adequate health services in the world, providing health care and rebuilding health systems in fragile states is a complex undertaking. The Health and Fragile States Dossier – developed by the Health and Fragile States Network, the IDS Health and Development Information Team, and Eldis, and funded by the UK Department for International Development – highlights the challenges and approaches to delivering health services in fragile states.
